

CORRECTIONS

■ The profile of CPA Ronald D. Finkelstein of Morrison, Brown, Argiz & Farra in the March 30 Heavy Hitters in Health Care section inaccurately described him as an attorney. He is also past chairman of the Florida Institute of Certified Public Accountant's Health Care Industry Committee, not the current chairman. A corrected profile is below.

Finkelstein

Though he spends much of his time in the office or testifying in court, CPA Ronald Finkelstein stays true to his practice area - health care - by cycling 125 miles a week.

Maybe it's those long rides that give him the stamina to head his office's health care service group; brainstorm material for Practice Management Advisor, a quarterly publication he helps edit, lecture frequently at industry seminars and conferences; and serve on the steering committee of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants' National Healthcare Industry Conference. He is also a past chair of the Florida Institute of Certified Public Accountants' Health Care Industry Committee.

The most challenging part of Finkelstein's job is getting health care providers to understand the financial impact on their business of declining reimbursements. But through open communication, sharp recommendations and perhaps some of the patience he's learned on the cycling path, Finkelstein is able to help his clients profit.
